STONE DESCRIPTION:

Capricorn Buff sandstone quarry sawn plinths and seating

Anzac Memorial Walk has national significance

In excess of 150 tons of Capricorn Buff sandstone was used to complete stages one and two of the Emu Park Centenary project.

The Memorial Walk forms a significant part of a Commemorative Precinct, which will be developed during the centenary years of WW1 (2014-2018).

The Precinct is designed to recall, preserve and honour our war heritage and those who fought and died in WW1.

The Memorial boardwalk is 175 metres long. The Memorial Court Precinct will initially feature a pictorial screen featuring the work of local artists, a grassed mound and landscaping, which includes Gallipoli Pines. Further architectural works, seating and paving will be added over the next two years.

The quarry sawn plinths and seating blocks were generously donated by Capricorn Sandstone. The blocks were hand-finished and inscribed by local masons.

The project was originally inspired by the late Ross Coulter, who designed the initial concept, which was endorsed and approved by Livingstone Shire Council and the RSL.
